WAVES LEAP OVER SHIP

Vessel Wins Struggle, Though
Sea at First Outfights
Crew and Engines.

An unheralded West India cyclone of phenomenal force came pretty near wrecking the United Fruit steamship Almirante, in yesterday from Caribbean ports. She encountered the twister about 100 miles south of Kingston, Jamaica, on the afternoon of Friday, September 24. The barometer earlier in the day had dropped more than an inch and Capt. Farnham Grant had instructed the wireless operator to call steamships and find out what sort of a blow he might expect. All the vessels he got in touch with said they wanted any storm. He decided then he was going to have just an infant squall. In a few hours it turned into a prodigy.

The blast came so fierce on Friday evening that the ship's engines could not keep her head to sea. While she was still striving to lay to a ponderous comb over her bow and ripped off the covers of hatches 2 and 3 forward. About eighty deck passengers, all blacks from the Canal Zone, including many women and children, were sent to shelter, the women and children going to the cabin and the men to quarters with the crew.

Outfought by the Sea.
Officers and able seamen made vain efforts to crawl forward to close the hatches. They were driven back by breakers that rolled in and came in hurricane gusts at 120 miles, according to estimates of the officers.

The Almirante drifted into the trough and the skipper, in a last effort, tried to hold himself in the trough. Oil was used to cut down the crests and prevent them from breaking aboard, but it had little effect.

The wireless operator, true to the tradition of his plucky class, stuck to his job and made an effort to tell his crew to brace up. He was not trying to hold himself in the trough. Oil was used to cut down the crests and prevent them from breaking aboard, but it had little effect.

TAX JUMP VICTIMS ARE TWIXT SMILE AND ANGER

"Sounds Like Blackmail," Says John H. Davis, Banker
—Get a Searchlight to Find My Money," Says William H. Goodman.

The tremendous boosting of personal tax assessments in the city excited every expression but one of approval from the assessed yesterday. The sentiments of the "millionaires" in the tax list ranged from anger to jeering contempt.

Perhaps the most forcible expression of opinion came from John H. Davis, banker, of 10 Wall street. Mr. Davis had just reached his home at 24 Washington Square North from the country. He is ill and said he had had no time lately to keep in touch with city affairs.

"The whole thing sounds to me like blackmail," said the banker with emphasis. "Personally I can say that the assessment against me of $1,000,000 is absurd. I do not know much about the new tax list except what a friend told me last night. What I have learned sounds incredible."

Different emotions, but emotions just as uncompromising to the new taxation, were exhibited by William H. Goodman, of 301 West Ninety-first street. Mr. Goodman is a member of F. J. Lisman & Co., of 30 Broad street, bankers and brokers.

"They will need a searchlight to find the $1,000,000 they have assessed me at," Mr. Goodman said. "I don't think it is fair to assess me at $1,000,000 when I was assessed at $100,000 last year. I am worth $1,000,000, but I don't know how much more than that."

"Some study of the list seems to show that persons in business in the heart of the downtown district with a few million dollars in the city have all been carefully noted and made the objects of the most flattering estimates," Mr. Goodman said. "I am sure that the city is getting a very good deal out of this."

Henry C. Davis, at his home, 27 West Fifty-first street, said "ridiculous" at the first mention of the delicate facts that he is assessed at $1,000,000. "I am worth $1,000,000, but I don't know how much more than that," he said.

"People should be willing to pay a moderate and reasonable personal tax," Mr. C. Davis said. "But the effort to levy taxes on fictitious assessments will only be a failure. It will simply drive people away from New York city."

Mrs. Helen M. Kelly, mother of Miss Eugenia Kelly, will decide today what course she will pursue with the hope of breaking up the young girl's friendship for Al Davis, the young man whose acquaintance she made at a Broadway cabaret.

The mother spent the greater part of yesterday conferring with friends in regard to a course of action. Her attorney, John F. McIntyre, had laid before her on Friday several courses that might be followed. She will see Mr. McIntyre today and have a final consultation before announcing her decision.

Mrs. Kelly was greatly angered because Miss Kelly was reported to have said that her mother was the first to take her into a cafe. Mrs. Kelly intimated that in the event of court proceedings the daughter's attack on her would be used.

Mrs. McIntyre said that on Saturday a stranger offered to find him a complete history of Davis. The lawyer arranged to meet the man at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

A cabaret was made yesterday for Richard Warner, the friend of both Miss Kelly and Davis. Warner arranged meetings between the two in his studio. Efforts were made also to find Mrs. Davis, who a few months ago obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from Al Davis. She was not at her home in Hempstead.

A meeting which was to have been held Friday to settle the estate of Mrs. Laura Mason was postponed until this afternoon because of the illness of Mrs. Ella Lyon, an heir to the Friday meeting of $1,500 in jewels and $2,000 in cash.

The robbery took place in the subway somewhere between 137th street and Fulton street.

Claims approaching half the amount of Mrs. Mason's estate had been preferred by Dr. Alfred Walker, a dentist, of 295 Central Park West, and Grace and Clara Walker. A Mrs. Mason died intestate. Mrs. Lyon became administratrix. There was $5,000 in cash, $1,000 in realty and $1,800 in jewels. The claims were to have been settled at the subway when the shock was so severe that she suffered a loss of memory. She did not recover consciousness until the next morning when she found herself at Sixth avenue and Thirty-second street. She is still under a doctor's care.

When Mrs. Lyon stepped from the subway at Fulton street and saw that her handbag was open and the money and gems gone the shock was so severe that she suffered a loss of memory. She did not recover consciousness until the next morning when she found herself at Sixth avenue and Thirty-second street. She is still under a doctor's care.

Plans will be discussed for extending the activities of the organization during the next eight weeks.

At the defense dinner to be given in Brooklyn at the University Club Thursday night under the auspices of the league the speakers will include ex-Gov. F. J. Murphy, Judge Norman S. Duke, President Pounds of the Borough of Brooklyn and Mr. Menken.

Mrs. Bertha Kullman, 48 years old, was found unconscious from gas in a bedroom of her home at 14 Vandewater avenue, Woodhaven, yesterday. She was revived at St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her husband said it was her fourth attempt at suicide in the last six years. She has tried morphine, chloroform and gas. This was the second gas attempt.

PURDY REFUSES TO REVEAL HOW TAX LIST GREW

"Interview" also includes an alleged statement by the president to the effect that the "new sources of information," which were "very relevant," couldn't be disclosed.

Mr. Purdy was quoted also as saying that the department had not depended solely on the various telephone and city directories in getting the names of those entered on the list, but admitted that the directories had been used in checking up.

He was further quoted as saying: "I am sure no one has been assessed for upward of $100,000 except those who were absolutely sure were worth that amount, as far as was humanly possible to find out."

"Most people know that I personally think the law is foolish, but we are going to enforce it as we find it on the statute books."

Attack Aimed at Plan.
The Society to Lower Rents and Reduce Taxes on Homes, through its executive secretary, Benjamin C. Marsh, issued a statement yesterday attacking what it calls "The Personal Property Tax Fiasco," in which it said:

"The stupidity of attempting to secure more revenue from the personal property tax has been illustrated convincingly by the childish effort of some of the new members of the tax board to raise the assessment on personal property to $4,000,000,000."

"Their action emphasizes the fact, however, that New York city must have about $25,000,000 more revenue next year than this. It cannot be secured from personal property. Even were the personal property tax law to be vigorously enforced, it would mean taking more money out of the pockets of wage earners, not out of the banks or accounts of the wealthy. It is equally impossible for the city or State to raise any additional revenue without taking it out of the pockets of wage earners."

"The dodges considered and recommended by privilege to extort money from the underpaid producers of the city under the guise of taxation, but in reality to increase the unearned profits of land speculators, are nearly exhausted."

"All wise municipal expenditures increase land values and land values only. Land values in the city have not increased much during the past year because the population has been nearly stationary, due to the temporary cessation of immigration."

"The most important question before the present city administration is: Will it continue to make the workers for the benefit of the land speculators, or will it begin to make land, which is the only form of property that secures any financial benefit from municipal expenditures, pay a fairer and larger share of the expenditures made for its benefit?"

Mayor's Tax Committee to Report on Investigations.
Alfred E. Marling, chairman of the Committee on Taxation appointed by Mayor Mitchell on April 19, 1914, to study methods of taxation with a view to making suggestions for improvements in the ways and means of creating city revenue, announced last night that the committee will hold hearings in November on the question of relieving buildings from taxation.

The committee has considered a large number of suggestions made by its sub-committees and others. It employed Dr. Robert Murray Haig, instructor of economics at Columbia University, to visit a number of places in western Canada and various parts of the United States to get first hand information on the actual workings of the system of relieving improvements from taxation.

Dr. Haig's report will be made public on October 11. Mr. Marling said there has been gathered for the committee data bearing on the possible effect of such a plan on the city of New York. This data will be made public with Dr. Haig's report.

Mr. Marling added that the committee hopes to be in a position to make definite recommendations on the subject of new sources of revenue before the end of the year.

Mayor at Training Camp.
Refuses to Comment on New City Tax Lists.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Wearing his uniform as a second lieutenant of the first training regiment, John P. Mitchell, Mayor of New York, to-day visited the camp of the third battalion of the regiment, now on a practice march of about eighty miles. The camp is located to-day near Clayburgh, about thirty miles from this city.

Accompanying Lieut. Mitchell was former Secretary of War Stimson of Albany. They arrived in this city at 5 o'clock this morning and after a hearty breakfast left with Gen. Wood for the camp, returning late this evening and immediately leaving for the south.

Asked to comment on the new city tax lists of New York, Mayor Mitchell said he had nothing further to give out than he had said to the papers before leaving the city, that if there was anything further to be said in the matter he would say it upon his return to New York.

Burglars Pay Routine Call.
Da Vega's Store Robbed Eight Times in Two Years.

Da Vega's Sporting Goods Store at 125 West 125th street was robbed some time yesterday for the eighth time in two years. The burglars took $30 in cash, smashing a $50 cash register to get at it, and $50 worth of watches.

Great crowds collected in front of the store last evening to watch the police who had surrounded it capture the burglars, but investigation proved that the burglars had long ago fled. The robbery was discovered when David E. Jacobs, manager of the store, walked by and through the window saw a number of golf balls on the floor. He called the police. As a result of previous losses the store has been equipped with burglar alarm system, but none seems of particular value. The thieves apparently entered and departed by a skylight in the rear of the store.

NINE MINERS, BURIED ONE WEEK, RESCUED

Victims of Explosion Near Pottsville, Pa., Will Recover Health.

HAD ABOUT LOST HOPE

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 3.—Two hours after prayer had been offered up in all churches of the Panther Creek high ley for the preservation of the lives and the rescue of nine miners who were entombed since last Monday in the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company's Foster Tunnel mine at Coaldale seven days with little hope of success broke through the last remaining barrier this afternoon and found the men alive and well.

The victims were located in a distant chamber of the mine after the rescuing forces had braved dangers of food and black damp in addition to all other underground menaces. The rescued men after being hoisted to the surface were taken directly to the Panther Creek Hospital, some of them protesting, however, that they were all right and demanding to be allowed to go home. Crowds of cheering men, women and children greeted the ambulances on the way from the mine to the hospital.

"We were at work last Monday morning blasting coal to be sent into cars in the gateway," said John Bohler of Bull Run, one of the entombed men, "when suddenly, just after a blast, we felt a rush, followed by a rush of coal and dirt. The force of the wind lifted me from my feet and I was blown up into the chute, which undoubtedly saved my life, for just then it fairly rained boulders and smaller rocks, while a flood of water rushed by."

"After lying in the chute for several hours, feeling much bruised, I heard shouts and joined Murphy, Bordi, McAndrews and the other men, who had fixed up a place in one of the chambers, where we thought we would be free from the backing up of the water, which was still flowing through. In the stillness following the explosion the rush of water sounded like the roar of a waterfall."

"Where all the water came from was a mystery to us, but we all prayed that the outlet would not be stopped. We knew that if that outlet once became blocked we were dead men."

"The stories were told by other of the nine victims. All had apparently given up hopes of rescue. It is believed that each one will recover. Although without food except the lunches they had brought in their packs on the day the explosion imprisoned them, the victims did not suffer for lack of water."
